

Autocrines and Paracrines

- Autocrines – chemicals that exert their effects on the same cells that secrete them
- Paracrines – locally acting chemicals that affect cells other than those that secrete them
- These are not considered hormones since hormones are long-distance chemical signals